Performance

The stock market experienced a very strong month in November mainly due to the strong performance of US listed companies. Real estate also performed well, but bond market had to take a small step back as a result of rising interest rates.

The neutral risk profile achieved a return of 2.2% in November, bringing the return for the year to 21.7%. The most offensive profile has so far achieved the highest return in 2019 (+28.1%).

The table below gives an overview of the five different standard investment profiles (without bandwidths). The classifications of risk profiles are motivated by the AFM (the Dutch Authority for the Financial Markets) and mainly based on historical risks and returns.

We respond to the current market conditions by putting weights (within the bandwidths) to the various asset classes: equities, bonds and alternatives. We call this the tactical asset allocation. We were overweight equities at the start of the year, but we reduced this overweight position in two small steps. At the moment we do not have an overweight position in equities anymore and are the strategic and tactical asset allocation identical. Equities have the best long-term outlook, but given the recent sharp rise in share prices and the increased risks of, for example, an economic downturn, we are slightly more cautious. For bonds, the outlook is less than average due to low interest rates, but the risk is also lower.
