Tactical asset allocation

Each investment profile has a strategic allocation with bandwidths to equities, bonds and alternatives. The table below gives an overview of the five different standard investment profiles (without bandwidths). The classifications of risk profiles are motivated by the AFM (the Dutch Authority for the Financial Markets) and mainly based on historical risks and returns.

Table: profiles and strategic asset allocation

	Defensive	Moderate defensive	Neutral	Offensive	Very offensive
Equities	22%	33%	47%	65%	80%
Bonds	73%	61%	45%	25%	10%
Alternatives	5%	6%	8%	10%	10%
Cash	0%	0%	0%	0%	0%
TOTAL	100%	100%	100%	100%	100%

Traditionally, bonds are seen as the safest investment, but due to the persistently low interest rates, bonds no longer offer the protection they offered in the past. Due to the low or even negative interest rates, there is no longer a "certain" return that protects capital. In addition, the likelihood that interest rates will rise in the longer term increases, which means that bond prices will fall. On balance, bonds have thus become more risky than in the past. Particularly in the more defensive risk profiles, which traditionally consist for the most part of bonds, we therefore increased the weight of equities. DoubleDividend expects that this will give the portfolios a better risk-return ratio, especially if interest rates rise somewhat.

In addition, the increased volatility in the financial markets also means that the allocation to alternatives (real estate securities and infrastructure) is adjusted somewhat. Our recent analysis shows that, more than in the past, real estate shares offer a net return on balance comparable to that of equities over the longer term, but that this return is accompanied by higher volatility. To reduce the risks, we have already expanded the real estate equities portfolio with sustainable infrastructure in 2020. Nevertheless, the strategic allocation to alternatives is also being adjusted somewhat. It is expected that this will reduce the volatility of the total investment portfolio slightly without affecting long-term returns.

Although the adjustment of the standard weight is expected to lead to a more favourable risk-return ratio, this cannot prevent the total volatility in the markets and thus in the investment portfolios from increasing in the near future. Especially an investor with a shorter investment horizon should take this into account.

Within the bandwidths, it is possible to respond to current market conditions. We call this the tactical asset allocation. At the moment, we have opted for a very slight overweighting of equities and to a lesser extent alternatives at the expense of bonds. The more offensive the profile, the lower the weight of bonds. In the most offensive profile, we even chose not to invest in bonds at all at the moment.
